Bible Words for Today

LUKE 24:30-31 - 'When He was at table with them, He took bread and blessed, and broke it, and gave it to them and their eyes were opened and they recognized Him." (RSV)

The Bible is superb in giving guidance as to how one can evidence greatness in the common round. It was the way Jesus broke the bread and the manner in which He gave it to them that evidenced His greatness to those with whom He had walked on the road from Jerusalem to Emmaus.

The manner in which one acts in relation to ordinary things is most revealing of what he really is. It is never so much the ability to do the unusual that reveals one's inner self; it is the manner in which he performs the tasks of the commonplace. It is amazing how often the Bible shows that God has used simple things, such as Jesus did at Emmaus, to reveal Himself to men. It is for us to learn that, if we are to be revealers of Him to others of our kind. Elijah learned it when standing at a cave's mouth on Mount Carmel. He discovered that God would not employ an earthquake or a raging fire or a breaking wind to reveal Himself to Israel, but that He would use an ordinary "still small voice." People who are God-likedo likewise, always.

There are those who perform the lowly tasks of the ordinary hours with such grace and dignity that the commonplace is transformed and much luster put into life. Thus they follow Him who caused the men of Emmaus to say - "Did not our hearts burn within us as He talked to us on the road?"

Brownell's Dream

Criticism of the U.S. Supreme Court back home made a significant backdrop for U.S. Attorney General Brownell's opening address to the London convention of the America Bar Association.

He proposed that all major powers should think seriously of judicial tribunals with compulsory jurisdiction over international disputes. This concept of international rule by law, he admitted, will have to be brought along gradually, until it has won acceptance. Ultimately, however, he believes all nations can reach the goal he is proposing - that instead of going to war to settle disputes they will be willing to go to court and abide by the court's deci-

This was a bold projection of faith in the judicial process, in the light of current resentment in the United States against Supreme Court decisions in controversial issues. But the attorney general pointed out to questioners, after he had delivered his official address, that there would be the same period of transition in judicial settlement of disputes between nations that there had been in settlement of disputes between private parties.

He believes, nevertheless, that the concept can be developed. There will be carping, bickering, charges of bad faith and threats to spurn the courts and unseat the judges. But there will be, also, what there has been in the United States - an awareness of the all-around advantage of taking out anger and disappoint ment on the courts and their judges instead of on the litigants. Perhaps that is as far as rule by laws, as interpreted by men, ever can be expected to go.

Imperfect as it sometimes is, it beats vio-

'How Are Things?'

Somewhere in the suburbs there is a hammock between two trees, as hammocks should be. If we can get permission to use it, there is a puzzle that will take some swinging before it can be solved.

What is the proper answer right now when that fellow who always wants to know how things are pops his question? Should you bend his ear with statistics to prove that things never were better? Should you bombard him with statistics to prove that things are so good they need only to keep moving sidewise to make them perfect?

Should you murmur darkly about inflation? Or should you rivet him with a bright eye and talk about long-term trends and an ever-expanding economy?

To sum up, should you parrot everything you hear and read, to show that you know the score? Or should you look inward, consult your own feelings and reply that things are about as good as anyone could expect them to be, meaning that you do not have any deep-set convictions about things being either one way or another?

Meaning, in short, that things are close to normal.

It will take some swinging to settle this satisfactorily. With dog days at hand, it might be a good idea to buy a hammock, find two trees in the right place and settle it at leisure before Labor Day.

Lower Education

The phrase "higher education" is tossed about so casually as more young persons seek its dvantages that few of us find time to think about the problem of lower education which has been raised by the demand for higher edu-

James C. Worthy, a vice president of Sears Roebuck & Co. and the director of the company's foundation for education, has presented his startling statistic about the buying power of college and university teachers:

That their real earnings have declined by 12 per cent since 1941 while the real earnings of industrial workers have risen by 55 per cent; that their salaries would have to be increased by 72 per cent to restore their earning power 50 years ago.

The public has been made aware of the earning problems of public school teachers and is trying to do something about it. But the earning problems of college instructors are more remote, therefore of less concern. If the time is close at hand when higher education will be a necessity for millions, instead of a luxury for hundreds of thousands, it will be veloped by a prospering domestic imperative to keep higher educators from be- oil industry to take care of any ing wiped out of existence by economic pressure.

Something is awry when unskilled labor can ommand more earning power than a teacher who has spent upward of 20 years in preparaion for a career.

It is true, of course, that the sniping is being done by the Democrats and that modern politics evidently knows no limits to the smear -it's all supposed to be within the rules of party warfare.

It was President Franklin D Roosevelt who once said that, as soon as name-calling starts, it is evident that the name-caller is devoid of persuasive arguments and has begun to lose the debate.

THERE IS a curious kind of innuendo in all the smears.

The attempt lately has been to build in the public mind the impression that the President lacks integrity as well as fidelity to his office.

This comes in a summer already marked by oilmen's worries over a glut in supplies and price rises that are hard to make stick. Four groups could be affected by the president's plan:

1. Producers. Domestic well owners see in a cut in imports the chance to increase their own production, now held to 13 days a month in Texas by the regulatory bodies. Companies with large overseas oil sources see their profit margins narrowed if they can't bring in as much of the oil they produce more cheaply abroad.

2. Consumers. Their interests is simple. They want plenty of gasoline and fuel oil and they would like to see the price held down rather than rising again.

3. Defense planners. Their interest is in enough reserves being found in this country and enough production facilities deemergency, such as the possible cutting off of foreign sources by an enemy.

4. Other producing nations. Other friends, particularly Venezuela, profit greatly by sale of oil to the United States. The oil rich Arabian countries eye ruefully anything that might cut into their royalties.

The President's order for a voluntary out in imports is aimed chiefly at the third group, the defense planners. Their argument: The domestic oil industry must be kept prosperous or the incentlitive for drilling new wells will

Why British Dislike Dulles

Not anti-Americans, but anti the United States administration and in particular anti the U.S. secretary of state, who in the minds of the general public is the most disliked and criticized foreign secretary since the Nazis' Ribbentrop.

This is an ugly thought for those who love and are connected with the United States. But no amount of official ministerial smooth talk can disguise the unpleasant fact that the majority of Britons still regard the United States, several months after Suez, as an only erst-

Will Harvard Speak Up?

The Yale Bureau of Highway Traffic reports that after 30 years of study it has been unable to determine the cause of auto accidents. This can set back higher education for at least a

We think that the bureau's investigators must have spent most of the 30 years singing the Whiffenpool song far from the main highways and street intersections.

F. W. HURD, the Bureau's director says, 'We all know that speed and recklessness kill thousands. But what makes drivers speedy and reckless? Why are thousand of drivers nonspeeders and cautious?" Well, it could be, Mr. Hurd, that a verdict that 30-year probe hasn't been able to come up with the cause of reckless driving, helps the reckless driver in his belief his own motivations are too deep for him to understand. As to the thousands who drive reasons bly, we will bet a new hardtop against a flat 'ire that Mr. Hurd can't name 10. Here is our offer: We will take the safest and most decent driver the Yale Bureau can pick, and wager that if followed two miles there will be at least two street intersections at which he will refuse to give a fellow autoist an even break, and three where he will proceed through the caution light.

THE CAUSE of auto accidents may escape a university but it is clear to anybody who has studied the situation from a safe position behind a grammar - school fence . . . The plain inescapable fact (obvious from a study of 30 minutes instead of 30 years) is that a position behind the wheel of an auto completely changes a man's personality.

George Q. Citizen can be a smiling Dr. Jekyll, doffing his hat and saying, "You first, please," in all other phases of life but put him in a motor car and he can make the terrible Mr. Hyde seem a babysitter.

IS IT POSSIBLE that Yale, one of America's oldest and finest institutions of learning, has gone the last 30 years without noticing that the gentlest, most polite human being, once at the auto wheel, begins to count split seconds, beat the lights, outwit other highway users at crossroads and play King "LEER" all over the highways and byways?

Hasn't it noticed that even the band-tooting "Boola Boola" on the way to the Bowl has to watch out at all crossroads or be booted into the ditch by well educated auto drivers claiming the right of way and ignoring "Stop" signs!!!

WE THINK ELIHU YALE, who founded the college, would want his money back if he heard

Arthur Twining Hadley has been dead for years but even in his time, when autos were relatively few, he had to do enough nimble stepping to know what caused accidents: Human selfishness, Mr. Hurd, emphasized by a grip on a steering wheel!
